Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Annual Reports of the Chemical Laboratory of the American Medical Association, Vol. 2: January-December, 1918 The Chemical Laboratory of the American Medical Association was established in 1906 to assist the Associations Council on Pharmacy and Chemistry in the investigation of proprietary and unofficial nonproprietary medicinal preparations offered to the medical profession. In accordance with the principles of its foundation, the Laboratory of the American Medical Association concerns itself primarily with the examination of those proprietary and unofficial medicinal preparations which the Council has under consideration. The Laboratory determines whether the claims made for the composition of these preparations are truthful, and establishes standards whereby the identity and purity of remedies admitted to the Council s publication New and Nonofficial Remedies may be determined. In addition to the investigations made for the Council on Pharmacy and Chemistry, the activities of the Laboratory are directed in many other lines. It aids The Journal of the American Medical Association in supplying the medical profession and the public with information about the character and composition of drugs. When requested, it reviews and verifies the chemical data contained in editorials and original contributions. It is often called on for information as to the character and composition of quack treatments and so-called patent medicines. Through the columns of The Journal, and through direct correspondence, it responds to requests of physicians with information regarding the composition of medicines which they prescribe or in which they are interested. During the past year the laboratory has devoted a large part of its time to work carried out at the request of the Committee on Synthetic Drugs of the National Research Council, and other war-time...
