With α and β , equal to zero, the solubilities of the vanadium alums are obtained, and by eliminating the second term as well, those of the aluminium salts. We thus have a general solubility equation, all the terms of which can be referred to two variables; the one of these, α , applying to the one class of elements in the compounds, the other, β , to the second class. I believe that aside from the instance of addition properties, which the solubilities certainly are not, this is the first case in which a mathematical relation between the corresponding properties of a class of compounds has been found capable of expression. Below I give the values of α and β for each of the alkali metals, and the solubilities as calculated by the general formula. With the latter, the column D contains the difference between the calculated and observed solubilities, and D the variation from the values serving as a basis for the derivation of the constants. -
